

Living with Vision Loss

Technology Tips and Products

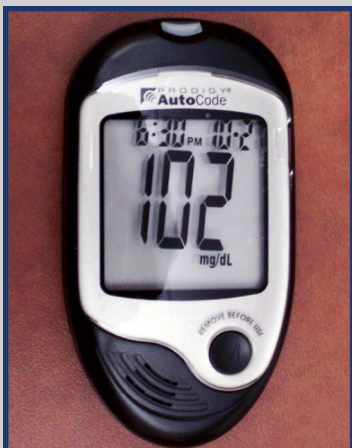

www.VisionAware.org

Digital Tablet
Displaying Apps

Talking Microwave

Talking Blood
Glucose Meter

Assistive technology (AT) refers to devices or equipment designed or adapted to help you with everyday living. AT opens a world of options for people with vision loss .

Learn how: visionaware.org/GStechvideo.

- “Talking” products range from watches, clocks and microwaves to prescription bottles. Learn more at vision aware.org/GS helpful products.
- Stay connected. Some cell phones and tablets have built-in accessibility. Check vision aware.org/GScell phones.
- Manage your finances with talking ATMs, money identifiers, and large-print checks. Learn more at vision aware.org/GS finances.

VisionAware™

For independent living with vision loss

Technology Tips and Products:

www.VisionAware.org

Desktop Video Magnifier

Portable Magnification Device

Talking Scanner

Continue to Read

- Learn about large-print, audio, braille, and electronic books at www.visionaware.org/GSreading.
- Use video magnifiers to enlarge images on a monitor or TV: www.visionaware.org/GSlowvision.
- Read about devices that can scan and display documents on a monitor and speak them aloud, as well as screen readers that can read aloud everything on the computer screen: visionaware.org/GStechtechnology.
- Learn how to use AT: visionaware.org/GStechtraining.

Find more tips at visionaware.org/gettingstarted

VisionAware[™]

For independent living with vision loss